

Financial services for the energy transition

After reaching the conclusion that the transition to more sustainable forms of energy supply and use offers a number of attractive business opportunities, the client has joined forces with EBP to identify strategic business fields, draft new business models and plan the future market activities.

In the first phase of the project, EBP examined the market for financing energy-related building renovations, defined a strategic position together with the client and planned market activities. In the context of this work, viable business models and strategic partnerships were also identified.

In the second phase of the project, EBP analyzed the market for financing power stations, grids and other types of public energy infrastructure. Furthermore, EBP advised the client on the selection of suitable business fields.
