

Reporting Results of the Climate Finance Readiness Program

Once a year, the Climate Finance Readiness Program, which was implemented by German Development Cooperation (GIZ), would carry out program monitoring. EBP applied its climate expertise to help GIZ evaluate and report program results.

Improving Access to Climate Finance

The GIZ implemented on behalf of the German federal government the multi-year Climate Finance Readiness Program. The program was designed to help select countries improve their capacities and institutional frameworks for accessing international climate finance, particularly from the Green Climate Fund (GCF).

Results Monitoring with a Climate Lens

EBP applied its climate lens to support the GIZ with the evaluation and reporting of results of the Climate Finance Readiness Program. GIZ used the reports to keep its clients informed about program progress, to measure its successes, to identify next steps and areas for improvement, and to document acquired knowledge from the program. This type of reporting and documentation is vital for programs such as this one, which stretch over many years and have multiple objectives and partner countries.

EBP's tasks

The principal tasks of the assignment included:

Client

GIZ

Facts

Period 2018 - 2019

Project Country Switzerland

Contact persons

Sallie Lacy
sallie.lacy@ebp.ch

- Reviewing the monitoring data from the program's partner countries and summarizing the results;
- Generating an overview of challenges and barriers to program implementation;
- Presenting next steps for the program in each of the partner countries;
- Preparing the program's final report

Other tasks included compiling results for each of the project's indicators to report in both quantitative and qualitative terms the program's progress towards its targets; providing summaries of the global knowledge products that the project generated in 2017 and 2018; and updating information about the project's contribution to a variety of development results, such as gender considerations, environmental protection, good governance and poverty reduction.